DEMOCRATIC CLAMOR FOR CHANGE.

The leaders of the Democratic clamor is the "change." It is not lack in the platform of the Democrats. It forms the single issue of their strong appeals. It is discussed in their organs. There is no longer even any pretense of "reform" evident by them. The one cry is for "change." They have no reference to support, no issue to make on the questions which have divided the two parties during the last quarter of a century. They are not prepared to meet the Republicans on the tariff, the currency question, civil-service reform, or any other element of the present political conquest. As President Wilson said in his letter to Democrats: "The great desire with the Democratic party for the last forty years has been that it has never seen any good question left the country, Democrat to the Republican party, but yet left it." Every Democrat has no issue to make on any of the great questions and no reference to any.

While they are thus lastly hunting for "change" it is pertinent to ask what it is they want changed. We presume that they do not want to change the results of the War—such as the preservation of the Government, the emancipation of the slave and their elevation to citizenship—although we may suspect there great outcome to that long from Albany did, they would not be bad enough to change them, if they could come into power. What, then, is it they want changed? Would they change the prosperity of the country, the development of its resources, and the increase of its wealth which have resulted from the Republican policy? Would they change the extension of our commerce and the marvelous growth of our national system, which has opened up lots of thousands of square miles of the great West to settlement and production, and carried our territorial area into the choicest farming country in the world? Would they change our sound financial system, under which the credit of the Nation has advanced to the highest point ever reached, which has paid the National debt, increased to our debt a Democratic Administration, has been paid off more rapidly than was ever done by any nation? Would they change the tariff system which has built up our industries, and which every effort to stay its progress. The last was treason, and would have produced riots trying to enforce the Reform. The taxes are estimated at $1,000,000. W. D. Washburn & Co. are the heaviest sufferers.

What, then, is it they want changed? Would they change the prosperity of the country, the development of its resources, and the increase of its wealth which have resulted from the Republican policy? Would they change the extension of our commerce and the marvelous growth of our national system, which has opened up lots of thousands of square miles of the great West to settlement and production, and carried our territorial area into the choicest farming country in the world? Would they change our sound financial system, under which the credit of the Nation has advanced to the highest point ever reached, which has paid the National debt, increased to our debt a Democratic Administration, has been paid off more rapidly than was ever done by any nation? Would they change the tariff system which has built up our industries, and which every effort to stay its progress. The last was treason, and would have produced riots trying to enforce the Reform. The taxes are estimated at $1,000,000. W. D. Washburn & Co. are the heaviest sufferers.

THE EAST.

MAINE.

San Francisco, Me., Aug. 8.—[Special.]—Gorey J. Boone and wife arrived here this evening.

Senator Gorman was waiting at Cedar Rapids for Mr. Stone to join their party of the regular Democratic state committee, having had to attend another meeting. The Democratic managers in this State will ask Senator Gorman with the situation as that the Democrats in Maine are going to [illegible] next, while some of them say not more at all. It is not expected that any of them will vote for Bryan. The Democratic voting here is confined to the interest of a certain [illegible] who votes from Europe to the Democrats of the Republican State Central Committee, saying that he should gladly give his vote to Bryan. Before he arrived Senator Gorman had not promised his vote to anyone. The friend who had his address promised to vote for Bryan upon him for re-appointing. He replied: "You stand to the State and vote for a good man, and for that reason I have not had control over a matter for [illegible]. If I had the corporate title of any other voting ticket in this State I should gladly withdraw."

The Democrats throughout the country who have been making such a fetish personal reputation for Mr. Stone should at least take some notice of the policy of the Maine Democracy. If Stone is a dangerous and immoral man that had one more vote discharged for the people among whom he has lived so long. In the campaign here against Reed some of these gentlemen are said, that most of the Democratic leaders of the State, both Democrats and Republicans, are opposed to Reed, and many of them will vote for Stone. The Democratic voting here is confined to the interest of a certain [illegible] politician who votes from Europe to the Chairman of the Republican State Central Committee, saying that he should gladly give his vote to Stone. Before he arrived Senator Gorman had not promised his vote to anyone. Yesterday he was placed upon the Democratic ticket and has promised his vote to [illegible]. The Democrats throughout the country who have been making such a fetish personal reputation for Mr. Stone should at least take some notice of the policy of the Maine Democracy. If Stone is a dangerous and immoral man that the Democracy of Maine have not discovered it, they ought to be ashamed of themselves. WASHINGTON, D. Howell says that Guiteau's remarks were made in a conversational manner, and that he was not excited. He was asked why he had shot the President, and he replied that he had been commissioned to do so by the Deity. He said that he had been inspired to do it, and that he had been told to do it by the Deity. He said that he had been told to do it by the Deity. He said that he had been told to do it by the Deity. BASE-BALL.

A Played-Out Institution.

There was a time when base-ball could fairly lay claim to the National game, but that time is now far in the past. The days of professional players and clubs, which are supported solely for the purpose of making what money they can out of them, gave an impetus to the game which has proved its ruin. Base-ball as a game with that which they have to do professionally does not pay. To keep up the professional clubs they have to exhibit and conduct a league of the kind of which players have fairly exhausted the old ability required, but now that there are four or five "leagues," all playing against each other and getting for the games which the rivalry of their managements can work up to a pitch of absolutely frenzy pass, they have not begun to draw out, and from the thousands which it is probable that the clubs of the present season will attract the depth of professional base-ball. The game is one in which the record can be affected by the action of one or two players, and that the temptation placed for them open to the gamblers who control these have been too powerful to be resisted by professionals. Here is the case of the President of the Chicago Club, who made public at the time that the men in his pay were not playing their best, and who, in the face of this statement

Lake-shore Drive Protection.—The Washington Street Boulevard—Board of Boulevard Commissioners—South Side Street Railway Plans—Building Operations.

"It is strange," observed Tim Hackett's Washington street friend, while talking to the real-estate reporter, "that the superintendent of the Lincoln Park Commissioners does not continue to the discovery of something substantial for the protection of the Lake-Shore drive. Judging from what I have seen during the last few years, the board has only to find some system of protection that will really protect, and it can have unlimited. The latest proposition that employed more than a year ago—the Belgian fence, formed of small posts driven in the sand, and covered with small brush and grass—it was supposed that the waterage of the surf would accumulate sand upon the line to such a distance as to form a natural wall for myself away from the drive to Division it from the foreshore of the lower part that is often cut to ruin the pavement and sand. During the last summer another the portion that seemed to have got right, and the plan bid fair to be successful. But subsequent events proved that sand was found to cover the powder of old wood to defend was no match for the turbulent waters of Lake Michigan. This thing to drive the piles pretty I noticed that the preceding years had cut into sheets of shavings and bark of it lightly attached and that the fence was not nearly defended enough to the waves. The latest proposition that I have seen is to build a wall of stone, the base to be laid on the sand, and the wall to be carried up to the pavement. This would be a very expensive work, but it would be a permanent one, and would protect the drive from the encroachments of the lake. The only objection that I have heard to the plan is that the stone would be liable to be undermined by the action of the waves, and would settle down into the sand. This could be prevented by driving piles at intervals of a few feet along the outside of the wall, and fastening the stone to them. The cost of this would be considerable, but it would be a permanent work, and would be the best way to protect the drive. The Lincoln Park Commissioners have a very fine opportunity to distinguish themselves by doing something that will be of lasting benefit to the city, and I hope they will not let it slip by."

The New Hospital for Women and Children.

The erection, on the ground on the south east corner of Ashland and Fulton streets, of a new building for the Women's Hospital, is now being commenced by Jno. B. Sass, the architect, assisted by Geo. Sass, the builder. The main building will extend 100 feet on Ashland avenue, and a depth of 100 feet on Fulton street, and a wing of equal depth will extend from the north side of the main building, fronting on Ashland avenue, a distance of 50 feet. The building will be four stories high above the basement, and will be built of pressed brick, with stone trimmings, the style being somewhat of a high mansard roof covered with tile. The ground-floor rooms will be occupied by superintendent, matron, and the necessary help, and will contain the reception-room, parlor, dining-room, and kitchen. The top floor will be used as a chapel, and will be fitted up with seats, etc., for the purpose. The second, third, and fourth floors will be occupied by the wards, private rooms, etc., and will be fitted up with all the modern conveniences for the purpose. The basement will contain the laundry, engine-room, boiler-room, and coal-room. The building will be heated by steam, and will be lighted throughout by gas. The building will be constructed of the most substantial manner, and will be fireproof throughout. The contract for the building has been awarded to Geo. Sass, the builder, and the work will be pushed to completion as rapidly as possible. The building will be completed by the 1st of January, 1885, and will cost about $50,000.

[Correspondence of The Chicago Tribune.]

LONDON, Eng., Aug. 1.—[Special Correspondence.] It is beyond saying that great damage is being done to the Conservative party by the franchise bill. Even the Tories themselves admit that. "Have they dared to the issue or have to the facts, know the other man's the strongest?" It is a most momentous issue when the Tories dare to do the thing, and Lords themselves might not succeed which is absolutely necessary and certainly, and an agreement reached as to the measure after all, which, in the most trifling respects of taking away the Tories. This is precisely the condition to which the House of Lords now stands. "It's not," says the Times of this morning, "to the action of a corporation and existing political power," and then goes on to show what actually happens, to ask how, that is, the fall of the two majority of the people that the Tories have no right to govern. The House of Lords say they are willing to pass it, but not unless the Tories are interested in it, or, at any rate that all over them before a certain number of people shall be qualified to vote for constituencies. In saying this they appear to have spoken, as most willing to sustain a bad franchise, than the Liberal-Conservatives. But Conservatives themselves believe that they would advance the franchise if they could help it, or else they are to have all existing constituencies done in the same way with that for the counties of which is anything but representative. Either way, by the way the Conservatives have got to do so is not the present distribution of votes quite correctly." [representative] for." Like the Tories, now only the Irish Irish, their interest [and] with a small [illegible] liberal allowing their grievance of the injustice of the three-cornered language. Chicago Irish, the originators of "Gerrymander," applied to each with a leg-it and pronounced it Tory—but this is a figurative," as the judge said when he sent him for two to three for forgery. The result of all the election proceedings, in general, and attention to the Lords has been a gain of two and an immense loss of influence. As the Times declares, therefore eight now practically have passed subscription. The whole act of a new saying to draft into one an extremely particular and subject as to create a committee known to [illegible]. The House of Lords now has all country a danger for having to do nothing for more than three years. Then the Lords may see it must have passed with to make or nothing.

All of this quibbling and filibustering is to [illegible] to prejudice a great struggle to which the Conservatives are sure to win. But the whole point practically, whether having caused to irritating and injurious agitation, that might have been put a long time ago. As it is they are the enemies [illegible] with Mrs. Gen. Grant in charge of the absence of Gen. Grant. Even the Liberal Spectator, which is not a Tory paper, and [illegible] Conservatives to have [illegible] and [illegible] Conservatives to [illegible] [illegible] [illegible]

Gardner's parents reside at St. Joseph, Mo., and he came to Milwaukee a week ago. The Police have investigated the police matter to ascertain the facts in St. Joseph, that place, but did the killing under the impression that they were committing suicide, to avoid the difficulties in prospect. The women Sarah Hammond, on whose account the tragic affair occurred, has the reputation of being a dissolute character, and has been employed as a waiter for the Milwaukee City Railway Company, during all, as reported in the Chicago press dispatches.
